A Brief History

In six different interviews, prominent members of the TAIAW discuss a wide variety of aspects of their respective lives. Some women provide details about their childhoods and families. Others provide details of their respective educational backgrounds and the circumstances that brought about their interests in sports. Moreover, interviewees provide insight into the motivations each of them had for striving toward greater opportunities for women in collegiate athletics as well as the obstacles that stood in the way of doing so. Founding membes of the TAIAW reminisce about the various oppotunities they had to initiate women's athletic programs and the reasons and circumstances that brought them to organize these programs as they did. Also, interviewees provide anecdotes about various mentors and other important people they have encountered throughout their lives, especially as these people relate to their involvement in woomen's athletics.

According to the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA), evidence-based practices are supported by rigorous research designs and demonstrate that they improve student outcomes, but the actual implementation of these practices in schools is limited. This essential guidebook assists coordinators of gifted education in implementing three evidence-based practices: universal screening, grouping, and acceleration. Each module includes an overview of research, administrative and assessment considerations, forms for implementing the practice, scripted presentation slides for educators and parents, and resources.

Modules may be used by educators within a series of workshops for an entire school district, on an individual campus or for important stakeholders.
